PREFACE.

Of all the alphabetic languages English is said to be the most difficult to spell. In a perfect language each letter always has the same sound, and each sound is always represented by the same letter; but in English a represents a different sound in each of the words hate, hat, far, all, ask, care, many, what, and so with other letters. A single sound may be represented by many different characters. Thus the sound of a as in hate is represented by different characters in each of the words faint, play, eight, they, great, gauge, and so with other sounds. In a perfect language there are no words pronounced alike and spelled two or three different ways; but in English there are hundreds of such words.

A thorough reform of this "monstrous English spelling" is in progress, and will prove a priceless boon to countless millions yet unborn, but the children now in school must be taught to spell according to the present standard. The more difficult it is to learn it, the more necessary it is to teach it. Inability to spell correctly is always considered an indication of a lack of culture, although the complaints from our universities, our colleges, our high schools, the press, and the school patrons all indicate that good spelling is rare.

In the preparation of "Graded Studies in Great Authors" the author was guided by the conviction that whatever we wish a child to learn for future use must be attractively presented, and that the child's mind should be early stored with beautiful and vital truths expressed in choicest language. He first selected a vocabulary which fairly represents the peculiarities of English spelling, and then searched literature for choice sentences which illustrate the use of these words. It is conceded that for a child the best knowledge of a word is to know it as used in a memorable sentence by one of the great masters of expression.

As the child is likely to carry through life what is copied or repeated from school books, the illustrative sentences should present the richest thoughts and choicest gems of expression that can be gathered from literature. In these rambles with the poets the child will hear the carol of the lark, the babbling of the brook, and the music of the sea; he will see the rainbow's arch, the sumac's gold and red, and the sunshine and the shadow chasing each other over the billowy fields. The child who is led into the bypaths of nature by these great word painters will learn to look through all "the five windows of the soul"; he will be charmed with the beauty of his surroundings; he will be deeply impressed with the dignity, power, and beauty of our mother tongue, the richest of all languages; he will be inspired to put meaning into his own sentences; he will learn that it is the gift of poetry to hallow every place in which it moves,—to breathe round nature a fragrance more exquisite than the perfume of the rose, and to shed over it a tint more magical than the blush of the morning.

Pupils will like to know about the authors of the selections, and will easily remember their names, their dates, their most famous works, some traits of their characters and incidents of their lives. Learning these in connection with each selection will be good preparation for the study of the history of literature. Do not speak of the personal deformities or failings of these great masters of literature. Do not ask the child to change poetry into prose. Teach him rather that a beautiful poem or a piece of noble prose is a work of art, and that he has no more right to change it or mar it than he has to mar a beautiful statue or a fine painting. These gems of thought and flowers of fancy have been gathered from many sources. In collecting them the author has wandered far through the flowery paths of literature; and, while the search has been a long one, he is loth to come to the end of a journey so enchanting.

In the preparation of these lessons the author has received suggestions from many teachers, to whom he gratefully acknowledges his indebtedness. He also takes pleasure in acknowledging his great indebtedness to his critic, the eminent philologist, Dr. Francis A. March of Lafayette College. Acknowledgments are due to Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and G. P. Putnam's Sons, for permission to use selections from their publications.

AMENDED SPELLING.

The following rule for amended spelling is drawn from the usage of the greatest poets, and recommended by the Philological Societies of England and America : —

Rule. When final ed is pronounced as t, spell it with t.

1. Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.
— WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.
2. I hope to meet my Pilot face to face,
When I have crost the bar. — ALFRED TENNYSON.
3. Having gathered flowers,
Stript the beds and spoilt the bowers. — ROBERT BROWNING.
4. Though old the thought, and oft express,
'Tis his at last who says it best. — JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.
5. And silver white the river gleams,
As if Diana, in her dreams,
Had dropt her silver bow
Upon the meadows low. — HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW.

The National Educational Association has adopted the following simplified spellings : —

tho	for	though	program	for	programme	prolog	for	prologue
thru	"	through	thruout	"	throughout	demagog	"	demagogue
altho	"	although	thorofare	"	thoroughfare	decalog	"	decatalogue

The storybooks have told you
Of the fairy-folks so nice,
That make them leathern aprons
Of the ears of little mice ;
And wear the leaves of roses,
Like a cap upon their heads,
And sleep at night on thistle-down,
Instead of feather beds !

These stories, too, have told you,
No doubt to your surprise,
That the fairies ride in coaches
That are drawn by butterflies ;
And come into your chambers,
When you are locked in dreams,
And right across your counterpanes
Make bold to drive their teams ;

* * *

There are no fairy-folk that ride
About the world at night,
Who give you rings and other things,
To pay for doing right.
But if you do to others what
You'd have them do to you,
You'll be as blest as if the best
Of storybooks were true. — ALICE CARY.

ROSES.

It is summer, says a fairy,
Bring me tissue light and airy ;
Bring me colors of the rarest,
Search the rainbow for the fairest
Seashell pink, and sunny yellow,
Kingly crimson, deep and mellow ;
Faint red in Aurora beaming,
And the white in pure pearl gleaming.

Bring me diamonds from the spaces
Where the air the earth embraces ;
Bring me gold dust by divining
Where the humming-bird is mining ;
Bring me sweets as rich as may be
From the kisses of a baby ;
With an art no fay discloses
I am going to make some roses. — ANON.

I love it, I love it, the laugh of a child
Now rippling and gentle, now merry and wild ;
Ringing out on the air with its innocent gush,
Like the trill of a bird at the twilight's soft hush ;
Floating off on the breeze, like the tones of a bell,
Or the music that dwells in the heart of a shell ;
Oh ! the laugh of a child, so wild and so free,
Is the merriest sound in the world for me. — ANON.

But when the patient stars look down
On all their light discovers,
The traitor's smile, the murderer's frown,
The lips of lying lovers,

They try to shut their saddening eyes,
And in the vain endeavor
We see them twinkling in the skies,
And so they wink forever.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

—SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE.

I shall speak of trees as we see them, love them, adore them in the fields, where they are alive, holding their green sunshades over our heads, talking to us with their hundred thousand whispering tongues.

—OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Sunday afternoon the birds were sweetly mad, and the lovely rage of song drove them hither and thither, and swelled their breasts amain. It was nothing less than a tornado of fine music. I kept saying, "Yes, yes, yes, I know, dear little maniacs! I know there never was such an air, such a day, such a sky, such a God! I know it,—I know it!" But they would not be pacified. Their throats must have been made of fine gold, or they would have been rent by such rapture quakes.

THE DAFFODILS

I wander'd lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils ;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretch'd in never-ending line
Along the margin of the bay :
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced ; but they
Outdid the sparkling waves in glee :
A poet could not but be gay,
In such a jocund company :
I gazed — and gazed — but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought :

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude ;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.— WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

Definitions.

A Vowel is a letter which represents a sound of the human voice but slightly interrupted by the vocal organs.

The vowels are a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y. w and y are consonants at the beginning of a word or a syllable; as in wet, yet; they are vowels in cow, dying, duty, etc.

A Consonant is a letter which represents a sound of the human voice greatly obstructed by the organs of speech.

A Diphthong is a union of two vowel sounds pronounced in one syllable; as, ou in out.

A Triphthong is a union of three vowels in the same syllable; as, eau in beau.

A Digraph is two vowels or two consonants combined to express a single sound; as, ea in head, or th in both.

A Syllable is one or more letters pronounced by a single effort of the voice.

A Monosyllable is a word of one syllable; as, class.

A Dissyllable is a word of two syllables; as, class ing.

A Trisyllable is a word of three syllables; as, clas si fy.

A Polysyllable is a word of more than three syllables; as, clas si fy ing or clas si fi ca tion.

Accent is stress of voice on a particular syllable of a word.

A Prefix is one or more letters or syllables placed before a word to qualify its meaning; as, un in unkind.

A Suffix is one or more letters or syllables placed after a word to qualify its meaning; as, ly in manly.

A Primitive word is one not derived from another word in the same language; as, man.

A Derivative word is one formed from another word; as, manly.

A Compound word is one composed of two or more simple words; as, inkstand, to-day.

Rules for Spelling.

The value of the Rules for Spelling will depend much upon the pupil's familiarity with the exceptions. These exceptions are really very few when compared with the thousands of words controlled by the Rules.

Rule I. Most words ending in silent e drop the e before a suffix beginning with a vowel.

EXAMPLE: choose, choosing; change, changing.

Be slow in choosing a friend, slower in changing.

— BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

Exceptions to Rule I.

Some words ending in e retain the e before a suffix beginning with a vowel, to prevent a change in pronunciation, or to preserve the identity of the word.

hoe ing	free ing	tinge ing	trace a ble
shoe ing	see ing	cringe ing	no tice a ble
toe ing	dye ing	change a ble	peace a ble
flee ing	singe ing	a gree a ble	mile age

It is inferred from Rule I. that e is not dropped before a suffix beginning with a consonant, but the following are exceptions :

aw ful	whol ly	judg ment	nurs ling
du ly	wo ful	lodg ment	a bridg ment
tru ly	wis dom	ar gu ment	ac knowl edg ment

Next to sound judgment, diamonds and pearls are the rarest things to be met with. — DE LA BRUYERE.

Some words pronounced alike.

1. Copy carefully. 2. Write from dictation. 3. Use the italicized words in sentences of your own.

1. From the blue rim, where skies and mountains meet,
Down to the very turf beneath my feet,
Ten thousand charms. — WILLIAM COWPER.

2. Not the meat, but appetite
Makes our eating a delight. — ROBERT BURNS.

3. It was meet that we should make merry. — BIBLE.

4. For with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again. — BIBLE.

5. All-cheering Plenty, with her flowing horn,
Led yellow Autumn wreath'd with nodding corn.
— ROBERT BURNS.

6. Sure if they cannot cut, it may be said
His saws are toothless, and his hatchets lead.
— ALEXANDER POPE.

7. There was one song, among the rest,
Above them all it pleas'd me best. — ROBERT BURNS.

8. And the soft breeze from the west
Scarcely broke their dreamy rest.
JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

9. Wrest from the unwilling earth his luxuries.
— PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY.

Rules for Spelling.

Rule II. In monosyllables and words accented on the last syllable, a final consonant after a single vowel doubles before a suffix beginning with a vowel (x, k, and v are never doubled).

EXAMPLES: bud, bud ding; pre fer, pre fer red.

While I nodded, nearly napping,
Suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping,
Rapping at my chamber door. — EDGAR ALLAN POE.

While Twilight's curtain gathering far
Is pinned with a single diamond star.

M'DONALD CLARKE.

As when the setting sun has given

Ten thousand hues to summer even. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Exceptions to Rule II.

The final consonant is not doubled when, in the derivative, the accent is thrown from the last syllable of the primitive; as prefer', prefer'ence; refer', refer'ence. But we have excel', ex'cel lent, ex'cel lence. Learn to spell the following words.

gas'es

gas'sy

def'er ence

pref'er a ble

gas'e ous

con'fer ence

in'fer ence

trans fer'a ble

(Why are l, r, and t not doubled in the following words?)

re vealed

of fered

lim it ed

slum ber ing

— WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.
8. In every scene some moral let it teach,
And, if it can, at once both please and preach.
— ALEXANDER POPE.

Rules for Spelling.

Rule III. Words ending in y preceded by a consonant retain the y on taking a suffix beginning with i; but on taking a suffix beginning with any other letter, y is in most cases changed to i; as cry, crying; glory, glorious; fancy, fanciful. The exceptions are, pity, piteous; duty, duteous; plenty, plenteous; beauty, beauteous. In these words y is changed to e. Y does not change before 's' as: baby, baby's; lady, lady's; enemy, enemy's.

That beauteous head, if it did go down,
Carried sunshine into the sea. — ALICE CARY.

A baby's feet, like seashells pink.

— ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

Words ending in y preceded by a vowel retain y on taking any suffix; as, joy, joyful; valley, valleys. The exceptions are day, daily; lay, laid; pay, paid; say, said.

Most joyful let the Poet be;
It is through him that all men see.

— WILLIAM E. CHANNING.

Adjectives of one syllable ending in y preceded by a consonant retain the y on taking any suffix; as, shy, shyly, shyness; sly, slyly, slyness; dry, dryly, dryness. The exceptions are -er, -est; dry, drier, driest, slier, flier.

1804 .- 1864

Formation of the plural of nouns.

The plural form of a noun is regularly made by adding s to the singular; as, tree, trees; pen, pens; book, books; bird, birds.

Such a starved bank of moss

Till, that May-morn,

Blue ran the flash across :

Violets were born ! — ROBERT BROWNING.

Again the blackbirds sing; the streams

Wake, laughing, from their winter dreams,

And tremble in the April showers

The tassels of the maple flowers.

— JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

When a noun ends in silent e preceded by the sound of ch, j, s, or z, the addition of s increases the number of syllables; as, niche, niches; judge, judges; cage, cages; face, faces; horse, horses; rose, roses.

Two roses on one slender spray

In sweet communion grew,

Together hailed the morning ray

And drank the evening dew. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

When a noun ends with ch, s, sh, x, or z, the plural is formed by adding the syllable es to the singular; as, church, churches; gas, gases; fish, fishes; box, boxes.

Where peaches glow with sunny dyes

Like maidens' cheeks when blushes rise. — JOHN GAY.

Some words pronounced alike.

A little I can read.—WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Formation of the plural of nouns.

When a noun ends with y preceded by a vowel, the plural is formed by adding s; as, boy, boys; key, keys; toy, toys; valley, valleys.

Remember'd joys are never past. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

When a noun ends with y preceded by a consonant, the plural is formed by changing y into i and adding es, but without increasing the number of syllables; as, lily, lilies; daisy, daisies; duty, duties.

But who will watch my lilies,
When their blossoms open white?
By day the sun shall be sentry,
And the moon and stars by night! — BAYARD TAYLOR.

The dances ended, all the fairy train
For pinks and daisies search'd the flow'ry plain.
— ALEXANDER POPE.

Some nouns have the same form in both singular and plural; as, sheep, deer, swine, trout.

Some nouns have two plural forms; as, brother, brothers, brethren; penny, pennies, pence.

The plural of some nouns is formed quite irregularly; as, man, men; woman, women; child, children; foot, feet; goose, geese; tooth, teeth; ox, oxen; louse, lice; mouse, mice.

I chatter over stony ways,
In little sharps and trebles,
I bubble into eddying bays,
I babble on the pebbles.

* * * * *
I wind about, and in and out,
With here a blossom sailing,
And here and there a lusty trout,
And here and there a grayling.

* * * * *
I steal by lawns and grassy plots,
I slide by hazel covers ;
I move the sweet forget-me-nots
That grow for happy lovers.

I slip, I slide, I gloom, I glance,
Among my skimming swallows ;
I make the netted sunbeams dance
Against my sandy shallows.

I murmur under moon and stars
In brambly wildernesses ;
I linger by my shingly bars ;
I loiter round my cresses ;

And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river ;
For men may come, and men may go,
But I go on forever. — ALFRED TENNYSON, The Brook.

I visited various parts of my own country ; and on no country have the charms of nature been more prodigally lavished. Her mighty lakes, like oceans of liquid silver ; her mountains, with their bright aerial tints ; her valleys, teeming with wild fertility ; her tremendous cataracts, thundering in their solitudes ; her boundless plains, waving with spontaneous verdure ; her broad, deep rivers, rolling in solemn silence to the ocean ; her trackless forests, where vegetation puts forth all its magnificence ; her skies, kindling with the magic of summer clouds and glorious sunshine :—no, never need an American look beyond his own country for the sublime and beautiful of natural scenery.

But Europe held forth all the charms of storied and poetical association. There were to be seen the master-pieces of art, the refinements of highly cultivated society, the quaint peculiarities of ancient and local custom. My native country was full of youthful promise ; Europe was rich in the accumulated treasures of age. Her very ruins told the history of times gone by, and every mouldering stone was a chronicle. I longed to wander over the scenes of renowned achievement, — to tread, as it were, in the footsteps of antiquity ; to loiter about the ruined castle ; to meditate on the falling tower, — to escape, in short, from the commonplace realities of the present, and lose myself among the shadowy grandeurs of the past. — WASHINGTON IRVING.
